the Geary Chinese exclusion act, upon appeal from the judgment of the United States Circuit Court, Southern district of New York, attracted an attendance that more than exhausted the limited accommodations of the court room. The visitors included many prominent members of the bar and a large number of ladies. The argument was opened by Mr. Joseph H. Choate, of New York, for the petitioners for writ of habeas corpus-Fong Yue Ling. Wong Quan and Lee Goe. Mr. Choate said he believed it was not permissible for counsel to seek to impress upon this court the importance and magnitude of the question involved in cases submitted for its adjudication. Nevertheless, he said, he would so far transgress the rule as to state broadly two questions at issue. They were: First, shall 100,000 of unoffending and helpless residents of this country, under the authority of an act of Congress, without review by its courts. be transported to the seashore and thence deported to their native country, and, second, in case the Emperor of China shall to-morrow feel inclined to follow the example of this great and enlightened country and expel from his domain the Americans residing therein, shall the voice of this people, either through its government, its press or by individuals be prevented from attering a single protest?

Solicitor-general Aldrich followed in behalf of the United States. He contended that these cases could not be distinguished from the Chinese exclusion cases. He contended that the Geary act had not for its purpose the deportation of Chinese laborers, but to provide a system of registration and identification, which is a lawful purpose and has never been disputed. The methods were lawful and the act reasonable and humane. Mr. Aldrich maintained the right of Congresa to require registration and identification of citizens or aliens. This legislation is authorized under the terms of the treaty of 1880. Mr. Aldrich quoted numerous authorities in support of his point that under international law a nation has the right to prescribe the terms of admission, or refuse to admit aliens to its territory or dismissal therefrom, Concluding, Mr. Aldrich said the police power rested with the State, the Nation or the people, and intimated that it would be better for the Chinese if the Nation retained control, for in the temper of the people in some States any action taken by the people of those States would probably be drastic in its character, having for its object the entire expulsion from their domain of an obpoxious race, Mr. J. Hubley Ashton, of Washington, concluded the argu-

CIVIL-SERVICE LAW EXTENSIONS.

Free Delivery Postoffices. Washington, May 10 .- Attorney-general Olney has rendered an opinion upon the question submitted by Postmaster-general Bissell as to whether the amended rule extending the civil-service act to all free delivery postoffices took effect and became operative on the day of its promulgation at these offices, or whether it was in abeyance at each of them until the classification had become complete and an eligible register had been established through examinations by the Civil-service Commission. After a review of the whole subject the Attorney-general bolds as follows: In so far as postal rule No. 1 required the Postmaster-general to classify the employes of the free delivery postoffices and required the Civil-service Commission to provide examina-tions, it went into effect on the date of its promulgation and required the work to be done in accordance with the revised civil-service rules; otherwise those rules come into force in each free delivery postoffice as soon as its classification shall have been completed by the Post-master-general and the first examination shall have been provided by the Civil-service Commission whether or not such examination shall resuit in an eligible register.

THE PADRONE SYSTEM,

Inspector Conkling Denounces It as Outrayeous and Injurious to Americans,

WASHINGTON, May 10 .- Immigrant Inspector Conkling, in an official report made to the Treasury Department as to the violation of the alien contract labor law, among other strong statements, says: "The padrone system is the most dampable, outrageous and miurious to American workingmen of any system that was ever practiced in the United States, and there is no denying the fact that it exists in almost every city in the country where there is an Italian colony." The report relates how Italian laborers are brought into this country, coached and instructed on the journey over, so that when they arrive by false swearing they evade the inspectors. "They have no conscientious scruples about perjuring themselves, and will swear to anything necessary to accomplish their discharge, in case they are detained," says the report. Mr. Conking says the railroad contractor need not be so closely watched in future in regard to the violation of the slien contract labor law as the "Italian banker and padrone." The former, in partnership with the padrone, furnishes the money, and newly arrived Italians are supplied in hundreds to work on American railroads to the exclusion of American workmen. The padrone usually makes a contract with the railroad contractors to feed the hands. A shanty costs him $100 or so, and he clears his original investment from the first month's receipts, the balance for many months being nearly all profit. The banker thus gets the money be had advanced to the padrone. "These aliens," Inspector Conkling says,

"are of the very worst element, vicious and hard to control, dangerous to the community near which they reside, and semi-brutish in their manners and habit." They work for small wages, live in a manner that other laborers regard as barbarous, and as a consequence Mr. Conkling finds that they are driving out laborers of other nationalities in railroad building.

PENSION FRAUDS.

Virginia Attorney Under Arrest for Making False Declarations,

WASHINGTON, May 10.- The pension Department believes that it has unearthed stupendous pension frauds. An attorney of Norfolk, Va., named W. R. Drewery, now under arrest, is charged with seenring fraudulent pension claims by the wholesale, using as his instruments in many cases colored men and women who could not read or write. About twelve months ago Secretary Noble ordered three cases dropped from the pension rolls that Drewery had secured, and later on he was debarred from practice. When the present administration came into power a thorough investigation was made into the cases that Drewery had seeured, and when it was concluded, a few days since, it was discovered that about 98 per cent. of the cases he had handled under the act of June 27, 1890, were secured through the filing of false declarations. The amount of the frauds can be understood when it is stated that 166 cases were granted and that every one of them carried arrears. The importance of the discovery has necessitated prompt action. and A. D Albert, supervising examiner for the Southern district, with several assistants, were immediately sent to Norfolk, where they are pursuing their investigations. They have learned that Drewery did a thriving business. In his office, occupying desk room, was a notary public named R. A. Richardson, jr. When Richardson went out of the office Drewery used the notary's seal, attesting the false evidence which he had prepared, and forwarded the papers to this city. Richardson is said to have been ignorant of the use to which his seal had been put, and Drewery has already been convicted of forging the notary's name. Drewery's stealings will probably aggregate $100,000.

THE VESUVIUS DOOMED.

Naval Experts Not in Favor of the Pneumatic

Gun System on Shipboard. WASHINGTON, May 10.-The Vesnvius is spparently doomed. The Navy Department experts in ordnance have about concinded to recommend against the pneumatic gun system on shipboard. Commodore Sampson, the chief of ordnance, will soon present his comments on the report of the board which recently examined the guns of the cruiser at Port Royal, and while the tomments by this officer will not boldly condemn the system, it is likely that he will discourage the continuance of this form of gun in the navy, much less the further introduction of the system in the service, as possible under an old act of Congress. Commodore Sampson ap-modore Folger, the latter's objections to the pneumatic system, and in the absence of any good reason for the retention of the fixed tubes in the bow of the Vesuvius the guns will probably be removed and the ship converted into an ordinary gunboat, although her lines and construction will not make her a perfectly satisfactory vessel of that type, while her vulnerability renders her of little use as a war ship. Her sides are easily perforated and her value, in consequence of the absence of adequate protection, is greatly impaired.

Eckles's View of the Duty of Banks, WASHINGTON, May 10. -At a banquet tonight in honor of the new Controller of the Currency, Mr. Eckles, in speaking of the national banking system, said, in part: I believe that upon every national bank is placed the moral obligation to hold itself in readiness to assist the officers of the government in every time of distress in maintaining the Nation's credit. I am aware that no legal reason much of wealth and power to themselves through the generous dealing of the government with them, the bankers of this country can ill afford to place themselves in the attitude of looking with indifference upon the anxiety of the financial representative of the treasury when the financial integrity of the government is threatened. A profer of help from them at such a time, spontaneous in its character and patriotic in its motive, would disarm a thousand critics, who are loud in their denunciation, and reconcile them to a system which they charge will bring the recipient special privileges denied to

Her plan is said to be to surprise her husband some fine day by taking him driving in the afternoon and stopping at the house, invite him to step in, where he will find all complete and dinner on the table.

THE KENTUCKY DERBY.

Lookout Won with Ease, in 2:3914, with Plutus Two Lengths Behind.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 10 .- The nineteenth of the long line of honored winners of the Kentucky Derby was crowned to-day and his name is Lookout. He won it grandly, leading his field from start to finish and sweeping under the wire, untouched by whip or spur, with his noble neck arched under a strong pull. Troubadonr, the winner of the big Eastern handicap, and the conqueror of the Bard and every other good horse of his day, can look upon this young son with pride as one who adds glory even to his honored name. Plutus made a noble struggle for the prize. Boundless, under whip and spur, was close behind Plutus, Buck McCann was next in line, throwing dust in the eyes of Mirage, with Linger, trailing far behind, an ignominous last.

It was an ideal day for racing. The sun shone bright and warm, bringing out the vivid emerald of the grass, trees and hedges, and touching with brighter colors the tops of the stables, the snow white of the paddock which encircled the yellow track, the gay flags and brilliant colors of the trim flower beds on the clubhouse lawn. Never in the nineteen years in which the famous Kentucky trophy has been won has such a host gathered at Churchill Downs. Twenty thousand is a fair estimate of the multitude which saw Lookout crowned with the laurels which mean for him a future life of ease and honor, and after death a place in the Valhalla of equine

The grand stand was packed, a solid mass of humanity, while thousands swarmed over the free field, jammed the lawns and struggled in the betting shed. The ladies' stand was a pasture of bright-colored gowns and bonnets, from which gay seting peeped the bright faces of Kentucky beauties gathered from every section of the old Commonwealth. The Derby marks Kentucky's gala day. From early in the morning a crowd had streamed out every road leading to the track, and as the hour for the races approached variegated ribbons of humanity stretched from the city to the track in long, winding lines,

SCENES ON THE AVENUE. Court and client, merchant and customer, master and man, with one accord took a half holiday, and in equipages which still more marked the line betweem them, hastened to see the great race, which is the State's pride. The landaus of the luxurious place seekers jostled with coal carts loaded now with a hitarious crew of dust begrimed but hilarious negroes; the coach of the rich merchant was challenged to race by his own delivery wagon, as with his own name and brand of goods decorating its sides and loaded with porters and cash boys it sailed out the boulevard. The street cars in long trains and loaded to the guards streamed out the avenue in unending procession. All stopped at the gates of Churchill Downs and poured their contents into the seething throng already gathered there. The national convention of Republican Leagues and Republican executive committee adjourned to see the races, and Mr. Clarkson, Chairman Carter and their colleagues dropped political planning and joined the throng which did honor to the Derby winner. The free field presented a scene to be looked on nowhere else in America. The greensward inclosed by the track was dotted in groups and masses with the thousands who, though unable to spend the needful dollar, with the sporting blood of the true Kentuckian, stood in the hot sun chaffing each other or indulging in small wagers on their Derby favorites. When the great race begun the trees and covered wagons were black with these free spectators, while unbroken lines stretched within the rail the full length of the half-mile stretch. A small bookmaker who sold pools for 25 cents, the cake and cider venders, did a thriving business with this rabble of the Derby throng, which took no interest in other races, but melted away as soon as the great event had been decided.

The track had dried rapidly during the day and when the Derby was started the track, though soft and slow, was not muddy, and huffs of dust followed the racers. Thirty-three bookmakers, the largest number ever seen on the track, handled the money of the multitude. When the first two races were finished and the Derby was on the tapis there was a general movement of attention throughout the crowd, and each candidate was warmly cheered as he came down the stretch for his preliminary

THE CONTESTANTS AND THE RACE. The starters and riders were as follows: Lookout (Kunze), Boundless (R. Williams), Buck McCann (Thorpe), Plutus (A. Clayton), Linger (Martin), Mirage (I. Murphy.) The betting was: Cushing & Orth's entry: Boundless and Lookout, 7 to 10; Buck McCann, 10 to 1; Linger, 15 to 1; Plutus, 4 to 1; Mirage, 6 to 1. Each carried 122 pounds, as this is the only Derby which does no handicapping.

When saddled and with colors up the horses made a beautiful display as five of the contestants paraded past the stand. The blue and gold stars of Lookout and Boundless blended prettily with the stars and stripes of Scoggans's Buck McCann, the gold and cherry of the Pepper colors on Mirage, and the red and white on Linger. Pintus's peacock, of the Bashford manor stable, did not come by the stand, but went straight to the post from his stable. Plutus caused some delay at the post by his ugly temper, but they were soon in line and were sent away on equal terms. Before a dozen strides had been taken Lookout had taken the lead and came sweeping around the turn and down the stretch with the low, easy stride so characteristic of his great sire. Linger was two lengths behind, Plutus third, and the others bunched behind. As they passed the stand they were in the same position, except Plutus had exchanged places with Linger, and all were running easy, especially Lookont, who was under a hard pull. Into the back stretch they dashed, and as they straightened out Kunze let out a wrap on Lookout, and the great colt sprang forward like a deer and raced away from the straggling field, leaving five lengths of clear daylight behind him. Meanwhile Boundless had come up to third place, Linger fourth. As the mile was completed Plutus made his run and desperately struggled to reach the flying leader. He cut down a length. but could get no nearer Lookont's heels. Buck McCann also set sail for Lookout, but could only reach third place, the others struggling behind. In this order they entered the stretch. Now was the last hope of heading the untiring leader. and under whip and spur his five opponents thundered down to the wire, through the dust from Lookout's heels. But, unruffled and serene in the sense of superiority, Tronbadour's son came on, not condescending to hasten his pace, and passing the winning post two open lengths in the lead and under a strong pull. Plutus was second, balf a length before Boundless, third. Buck McCann fourth, Mirage tifth and Linger last, ten lengths behind the leader. Time, 2:394, which was fast for the condition of the track. The delegation which came from the various cities of Vermont was headed by Goy. Levi K. Fuller, The Governor was accompanied by a host

The balmy breezes and bright skies brought out a large and enthusiastic crowd to take part in the dedication. The flag of Erin waved over all to-day, but it was flanked on all sides by the stars and stripes. The opening was timed for 2 o'clock, and at that hour all the invited guests were present. They were received by Lord and Lady Aberdeen and all got a hearty welcome. The mud-walled cottages, the chapel and Blarney castle were the center of attraction. The programme was of informal nature.

The vehicles are the exact counterpart of the coaches used in England in the beginning of the present century. The turnouts are painted in the brightest of bright yellow, red and black and with the guard in crimson and gold blowing vigorously on a brass horn, the coaches drawn by six English cobs, attracted considerable at-

There began to-day in the live-stock department a most novel competition. Seventy-five cows, representing the "cream" of cowdom in the United States, began a six months' competitive test of milk and butter producting abilities of the Guernsey, Jersey and Shorthorn stock. Each cow was weighed to-day, and everything each cow eats will be charged up to her until Oct. 27, when the footings of how much milk and butter each has produced will be made and the balance struck. The cows and their attendants will be watched by a corps of experts, representing the agricultural institutions of the country. The chiefs in charge of the horticultural department have inaugurated a system, or rather established a rule, which is causing much discontent among the fruit-growers who have exhibits in that department. The rule is to the effect that none of the exhibitors are to give to visitors any fruit from their exhibits. The chiefs base their action upon the fact that a concession has been sold for the privilege of selling fruits on the grounds, and that if the exhibitors are permitted to give away any part of their ex-hibits it will injure the business of the concessionaire. The fruit-growers, nevertheless, continue to give away fruit, and some have gone far as to make arrangements to have fruits shipped from their ranches, in order that they may continue the process One of the exhibitors from Oregon said that he had come here to exhibit and show what good fruit could be raised on the coast, and as "the proof of the pudding was the eating," he proposed to let the people prove it for themselves. This particular exhibitor has ordered a carload of fruit for every week. INDIANA FAIRS. MOTHER AND CHILD DEAD.

Coroner Beck Called to Investigate-Probably Caused by Poisoned Water.

Mrs. Suzanush Girzley, the young wife of James Girzley, an employe of the Parry Cart Company, died yesterday afternoon at No. 203 West South street, under circumstances so peculiar that Dr. Culver, the attending physician, felt it necessary to call in the services of the coroner. Two months ago Girzley, with his wife and child, aged eighteen months, came here from Bedford, securing apartments at the above number on West South street. A few days ago the child was taken ill, and on Monday died of a peculiar complaint. The mother had also been ailing for some time, and yesterday afternoon died auddenly in ber room. She had all of her clothes on when found by the family, and had evidently been taken with the fatal sickness without warning. The husband holds the opinion that his wife and child died from the effects of polluted water, which they drank on the premises, and the coroner will fully investigate this theory to-day. It is said that another child in the same house is in a precarious condition, and is suffering with symptoms similar to those present in
